

The Social Work Role in Domestic Abuse

Tuesday 21st August 2018

09.30-15:30

Browne House, The Crichton, Bankend Road,
Dumfries DG1 4ZZ

This event is part of a series of events being held across Scotland, in partnership between the Scottish Association of Social Work and Scottish Women's Aid, and on this occasion with support from Dumfries & Galloway Council and the University of the West of Scotland.

We will explore emerging themes of good social work practice in Scotland regarding domestic abuse. We will draw on what we know about what works, and what women and children tell us. We will focus on what social workers can do to promote the rights and needs of survivors and work effectively with perpetrators. There will be a variety of guest speakers.

The full programme will be published shortly.
